
In fake grass, some see real threat

By Megan Woolhouse

Globe Staff / January 19, 2009

For two decades, state public health officials have waged a massive campaign to eliminate children's exposure to lead, yet some specialists are concerned that the toxic element may have found its way into schools in the form of artificial turf fields.

(Full article: 1409 words)

Subscribers to the Boston Globe get unlimited access to our archives.

Not a subscriber?

Purchase an electronic copy of the full article. Learn More

$9.95 ¹	$24.95 ³	$74.95 ¹
month	months	year archives
archives	archives	pass
pass	pass	